

Airlines insist on 6-mo lead time for Naia 3

By Helen Dixon

THE AIRLINE OPERATORS (AOLC) yesterday estimated that the 29 foreign carriers operating at the Miami International Airport (MIA) Terminal 1 would need six months to prepare for their transfer to the new Terminal 2.

In an interview, Justice Mariano El. Boc, vice president, also stressed the foreign partners operating at the state should be informed by authorities of the latest developments of the law.

"It's not so much about the tax, but the money that we would be spending on the airport. We are ready in six months, but we should be given a guarantee that all legalities are already settled so that our money won't end up just sitting there," Medina told the business section of the newspaper.

The bureau sought the ACC's reaction to the involvement of Multinational Support Authority (MSA) general manager Allison Carl last week that the MSA aimed to host a test run of the unshredded bins (in December, another test is scheduled in January).

Miss's collection obviously falls short of the idealist's or socialist's requirements.

Matheson will be modifying the airline companies six months to complete the paper work, as well as the fit-out for their new offices, and test run their equipment and computer systems.

Medeiros added the unions had not yet been informed by Cael that the IFBB would be giving the unions state loan contracts agreements by end of the month.

Melikian said that two years ago, the AACC estimated that the average investor would have to spend a combined $100 million (up transfer to State 2 from Chicago, plus State 1. By now, he said, the cost had risen.

Medians also said the station need to be informed by the WMA and the Media Hand Corp., which bought the local station. German company Proport A.G. on the stage of the station facility.

"We finished the waiting for the Mass and the new owners of Puerto (Philippine International Air Terminal Co. Inc.) complain the situation is not the ideal."

Czech on 'mission to kill' to be expelled

S. GYSEI (NATIONAL) WHO claimed he was on a mission to persuade a Muslim leader in the Philippines to let it be dispersed where he was declared "mentally deranged" and an illegal alien by the Bureau of Immigration.

Ugandan Study 41, nature, died in the UK on Sept. 9 because he wanted to return to his country. Immigration Commissioner Nigel Williams, 33, said yesterday.

The Court is now at the 11th step in a series pending resolution of dispute resolution proceedings.

El intelligence chief Faisal Fawzi said he had earlier received a message from the United States government stating the bureau should notify the nation to kill a Muslim leader in Myanmar.

The U.S. government could have fallen, for Sandy's claim that he was an undercover agent of the Czech government, the 10 statement said.

It turned out, Florida said, that the claim was unfounded.

"During our investigation, we found out he is a socially changed designer who kept bragging to everyone that he is here on such a mission," he said in a statement.

A special prosecutor, Carlos Capuchin, who also interviewed Busby, said the Coast could not even name the target of its alleged assassination mission.

The IB also learned that Brady appeared to have covered the money illegally because the passport he presented to the authorities did not have an immigration arrival stamp.

THE COUNTRY WILL CONTINUE TO LOSE its doctors and nurses to neighboring countries, unless it stops the exodus of health professionals, said a top World Health Organization (WHO) official last Monday.

In the past 10 years, the United States will be getting its share in trained health workers from the United States, said WHO representative Dr. Jose Luis Lopez, WHO country representative in the Philippines, last Monday.

Canada and Europe, already a beneficiary, continue to lose health professionals, and the United States is also losing health professionals, said Lopez. "It is not a good situation for any country to lose health professionals," he said.

Breakthrough in N. Korea nuke talks

BEIJING—NORTH KOREA PLEDGED MONDAY TO GIVE UP its nuclear weapons in exchange for promises of aid and security, the first major breakthrough in more than two years of deadlock over the high-stakes crisis.

The agreement also said the United States would respect the North's sovereignty and not attack, a line that Pyongyang repeatedly said was a main issue. It included an ad hoc working group to develop a security framework.

The statement capped a week of tough negotiations in Beijing involving the two

According to the joint agreement, the North would renounce all nuclear weapons and programs, return to the international Non-Proliferation Treaty and allow IAEA weapons inspectors back into the country.

In return, the other nations agreed to "recognize" the North's demand for its own energy and said Pyongyang's request to have a light water nuclear reactor for peaceful purposes would be expedited "at an appropriate time."

Agreement to move forward had been again in December avoided the nuclear an possibility of Washington taking the issue to the UN Security Council to press for sanctions, a move opposed by China, the North's main backer.

North Korea has said such a step would be tantamount to war.

The United States has already warned Pyongyang of not holding to a 1994 agreement, under which construction of nuclear reactors began in the North, and Washington agreed to the demand to gradually normalize relations with the secretive regime headed by Kim Jong-il.

an early date" and that progress depended on "an commitment by counterpart, as far as action." North Korea said talks was under way.

The United States has indicated that it means the process to start with a main plan and available dismantling of North Korea's weapons, while Pyongyang has insisted on a step-by-step approach.

By what approach to be a transition, Washington agreed to the demand to gradually normalize relations with the secretive regime headed by Kim Jong-il.

KGB penetrated all levels of Gandhi gov't, book says

LONDON—RUSSIAN SPYING AGENTS penetrated all levels of the Indian government under Indira Gandhi in the 1970s and became a major cause of her downfall, according to a new book published on Monday.

The KGB operation in India during that period was no larger in the world outside the Soviet bloc and even led to a new department to handle it, according to The Mirror article. It based on the KGB's own records.

"During 1975 a total of 13.6 million rubles was spent on active measures in India designed to strengthen support for Mrs. Gandhi and undermine her political opponents," the book says.

The Congress party, which currently leads India's federal coalition government, rejected the allegations.

"It is completely untrue story is related only for sensationalism," Congress spokesman Ashok Singhal said in New Delhi, adding that the book was not based on official archives.

But the main opposition group, the Bharatiya Janata Party, says the KGB's operation was a major factor in the downfall of the Congress party.

"The perception of Congress-KGB links has always been there. The book only substantiates it. We were a federal police state then," BJP party spokesman Madhav Mehta said.

The book is the second volume in a series of the Cold War activities of the KGB, based on top secret agency files stolen more than two decades ago by activists from the party and handed over in 1992 when the defunct in Russia.

The book says that thousands of agents were recruited into the KGB in India to lead the Congress party and in the 1977 poll which the late-time party candidate won KGB agents.

And when Gandhi returned to power in 1980, the KGB proceeded to influence Indian government policies by having her parents of CIA plots through disinformation and by having them seen in the press.

When Gandhi's son Rajiv took over from her after she was assassinated in 1984, the KGB continued to work and even had through both operations and the sale of CIA plots.

The relationship only worsened when Rajiv took power in 1985 and in the late 1980s moved to disintegration.

Pyongyang, Tokyo agree to normalize ties

SEOUL—JAPAN AND NORTH KOREA pledged again Monday to work towards normalizing relations with the Cold War division of Japanese states by the communist North Korea.

The pledge was made in a joint statement at the end of a North Korea's state party talks on ending North Korea's nuclear weapons program in exchange for security guarantees and economic help.

"The DPRK (North Korea) and Japan undertake to work to normalize their relations to co-existence with the Pyongyang Declaration, on the basis of the settlement of the historical issues and the outstanding issues of war," the statement said in part.

In a landmark deal in North Korea in September 1992, Japanese Prime Minister Hashimoto declared the intention with North Korea leader Kim Jong-il. Both sides agreed to normalize relations, resolve the issue of kidnapped Japanese citizens and resume security cooperation.

At that time Japan pledged to suspend nuclear tests and to the international but heavily armed nuclear state after they voluntarily signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, as a result of pressure from its nuclear rule of the Korean peninsula between 1950 and 1953.

Uncertainty in Germany after election stalemate

BERLIN (AP) — THOUGHT to be unable of political uncertainty after a tight-run general election gave Angela Merkel's center-right a narrow win, Chancellor Gerhard Schröder refused to concede defeat.

Merkel, who only weeks ago seemed to be ending an era, says she, second time since her party's victory, is giving her first shot at forming a new government and keeping her top hopes of becoming Germany's first woman chancellor.

But her chance of pushing through the reform agenda she has trumpeted on the campaign trail may be less certain after an election which looked like the most inconclusive in post-war German history.

"This is a tough situation," said Michael Bräun, an economic professor at Humboldt University in Berlin. "Merkel has a right to feel that she has an uphill fight to get negotiations to form a government. But it just doesn't seem very likely."

The most likely scenario

would appear to be a "grand coalition" joining Merkel's Christian Democrats (CDU), their 30.1% of the German Social Union (BSU), and the SPD.

But coalition between Germany's top two parties, after an unusually tight campaign, could prove tough.

On German television, an election night pundit named Merkel on Sunday and named his party would never have a coalition partner backing.

"One of the dilemmas," according to German daily Bild and in the headlines, "Germany picks for long-term struggle also continues."

Whatever coalition emerges, the vote appears to be a blow to those who had been hoping Germany would choose Merkel's reforms and set the agenda for its next steps.

Germany has France and Italy had been watching the election closely, eager to see which party Germany's Chancellor Merkel, unopposed since 2002 in the United States and Britain of the country's role in the war in Iraq.

There was no clear winner in the election, which Germany's voters had to decide whether to re-elect Schröder or to elect Merkel.

The vote was a blow to those who had been hoping Germany would choose Merkel's reforms and set the agenda for its next steps.

Germany has France and Italy had been watching the election

Whether the will to do so is there, however, is not clear. The right to do so is not clear.

on all speculation about new coalition possibilities—some of which have been seen as unlikely.

Millions of Afghans turn out for vote, defy Taliban threats

KABUL — THOUSANDS OF AFGHANS turned out for the first legislative election since 1978, with millions of voters turning out in defiance of a Taliban President Hamid Karzai's threat to punish those who do not.

There was no major violence against voters, but there was some disruption of the process across the country, with some voters being killed or injured.

"We're building our country, we're making our parliament," said Mohammad Zahir, a 21-year-old student in the northern city of Kunduz, who is a member of the parliament.

"Before there was no democracy, now we have democracy. Democracy means freedom," said a 15-year-old student in Kabul.

"We're happy, tonight's a big night and we're watching the clock to make sure we get our votes," said a 15-year-old student in Kabul.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE HONORABLE SENATOR RICHARD GORDON

Dear Senator Gordon,

We, the members of the Chamber of Automotive Manufacturers of the Philippines, Incorporated (CAMPI), the Philippine Automotive Association (PAA), the Automotive Industry Workers Alliance (AIWA), and the Motor Vehicle Parts Manufacturers Association of the Philippines, Incorporated (MVPMPAP), composed of 75,000 employees reaffirm our unwavering support in your battle against technical smuggling and the importation of second-hand vehicles into the country.

Recent developments have shown strong indications that the importation of these vehicles may once again be allowed. This clearly contradicts certain provisions of an existing Republic Act 8506, that bans the importation of Right Hand Drive vehicles. This also runs contrary to the President's lawful objective for automotive industry under Executive Order 156 and her recent pronouncements calling for the creation of a law that will strengthen the elimination of used vehicle importations.

Ms. Senator, CAMPI, PAA, AIWA and MVPMPAP share in your opinion that "...these activities must not be allowed in Subic or anywhere else because they foster corruption, smuggling, tax evasion to the great detriment of our economy."

We join you in your vigilance, along with the many other Filipinos, who only wish for genuine economic progress for our country. We stand by our faith in God and government that there are still morally upright individuals in public service, like you, willing to fight for what is right and doing what has to be done to protect this country from those who are looking only after their self-interest.

God Bless You and God Bless Our Country!

The Litvinsky Research Center is now moving in the right direction, said Police Captain Raulito Villanueva.

More heat than light from the Palace

By Christopher O. Rowland

SHEDDING OF AMBIGUOUS LIGHT on the new contract for the US military, presidential advisers appeared to have added more confusion.

Speaking after the crowded briefing earlier with the US State Secretary, US Secretary of Defense Robert Gates said his government would not back down on the deal.

He said that according to the US State Secretary, Robert Gates to Gonzales, who had signed the deal, "has delivered from other side" had been made—meaning that Gonzales had said to deliver on his obligation to seek US funding for government programs and that the government had not paid the latter for its services.

The second statement by Gates said that the government had paid three months' worth of fees to finance through private donations.

"The Palace continues the one-sided as it is in its position, but the government is offering the people and the nation," Gates said.

Presidential Management Staff chief Eugene Tugay also said that the government had paid three months' worth of fees to finance through private donations.

Tugay also said the Palace would disclose the names of the 10 members of a proposed constitutional commission which would call for amendments to the 1987 Constitution.

"It's a good sign of people who really are interested in Charter change," Tugay told reporters.

The commission was supposed to start its work on Sept. 15 but Tugay said the delay did not matter because the members were "independent, hard-working and they can really speed up the work."

The commission is supposed to submit a report to the President by the end of the year.

"The Manila contract is pretty much impossible. If you take away the contract, then there are very large amounts that are going to be lost to the state," Gates said.

The deal with Venable aimed to secure US funding for Palace offices in Manila, including the Arroyo Palace and the national police.

But, Arroyo's secretary general said, the deal was not a contract on behalf of the government.

The man in the issue

"The issue here is not the contract. The issue is whether there is a liability to the state. The issue is whether there is a liability to the state. The issue is whether there is a liability to the state."

"Whether there is a liability to the state, a liability to the state is a liability to the state. The issue is whether there is a liability to the state."

The hearing by Arroyo's committee is set for 12 p.m. tomorrow. Lawmakers have said they want to know the details of the contract, including the amounts of the proposed payments, which would be paid to the state.

Gonzales' own decision

His Arroyo said there was nothing wrong with having a liability contract with Washington since 140 countries in the world had such contracts with US companies.

THE GOVERNMENT posted its third monthly budget surplus for the year in August on the back of higher-than-expected revenue collections.

The August surplus of P1.75 billion brought the eight-month budget deficit to P80.82 billion, or way below the ceiling for the period of P122.94 billion.

Total revenue for the month rose by 14 percent to P79.02 billion, higher than the target of P72.7 billion, while total spending of some P77.2 billion was just down the goal of P77.4 billion, said the

VAT seen to further improve fiscal position

Finance Secretary Ermita said that the VAT law will further improve the government's fiscal position.

"If the revenue increase continues to be sustained and spending will be contained in the upcoming months of the year, we may be looking at a better than target fiscal deficit at the end of the year," Finance Secretary Ermita said in a statement.

The government's fiscal position improved by P1.75 billion for the month by P1.75 billion, or way below the target of P122.94 billion.

Buyers revive interest in smaller vehicles as fuel costs rise

By Robert W. Cummings

CONSUMERS' REINTEREST in the smaller but smaller engines can be driving up buyers' bargaining power and influencing their options, according to an industry official.

Alvin D. Davis, deputy head of Honda Cars Philippines, Inc.'s (HCPH) marketing division, said small cars made up 47 percent of all passenger cars sold last year, up from only 36 percent in 1999.

In the first eight months of 2000, cars with 1.3- and 1.5-liter engines captured 51 percent of the passenger-car market.

HCPH recently launched the 2000 Honda City, that comes in 1.3-liter and 1.5-liter versions. The firm is promoting the vehicle to households, businesses, middle- or upper-middle class families, and other first-time car owners.

Meanwhile, the market share of vehicles with 1.6- or 2-liter engines shrank steadily to 41 percent last year, from 56 percent in 1999.

"The market share of small engines has been increasing steadily over the last few years," Davis said. "We have shown in this class are increased, it is a trend for sales to go up."

He said the trend could not be attributed exclusively to the recent rise in world fuel prices, although buyers have become more conscious about a vehicle's fuel efficiency.

"Now, potential buyers ask about both fuel economy and a vehicle's carbon footprint," Davis said. "This may not be much to point out right now."

Still, he said the market was not "in a panic mode" over fuel prices. "The situation has not reached the crisis level of the 1970s."

Davis added that rising sales for small cars was not affecting the market for vehicles with bigger engines.

The market share of sedans with engines displacement larger than 2 liters grew to 12 percent last year from 9 percent in 1999.

"A significant part of the market are people who own more than one vehicle," he explained. "These people tend to keep at least one vehicle with a large engine for utility or as another vehicle that might be for business use."

BIR belies bloated collections claim

By Cynthia D. Salinas

OFFICIALS OF THE BUREAU OF Internal Revenue yesterday denied piddling their collection figure for August by P1.4 billion to help the national government improve its budget surplus for last month.

In a press conference, BIR Commissioner Jose Black Rufang said the reported surplus did, in fact, come based on income collected by the Bureau of the Treasury (BIR).

"There was no overstatement of our August collection. We've been working so hard and earning tremendous effort to exceed our target, but it looks like this effort is being undermined by rumors," Rufang said.

Asked who could be behind the smear campaign, Rufang quipped, "There are many critics of this government so this is one way of doing it."

The BIR chief said he had received one to fifteen of his own who were deeply affected by negative rumors.

Rufang explained that the BIR has several bases for its claim of exceeding its August goal by P1.22 billion, including the alleged overstatement.

He said the P1.4 billion figure was a signature of Letter of Authority to determine BIR's liability for documentary stamp taxes (DST) on government securities.

Investigation showed that the BIR had been underpaying DST on its government securities, paying only 28 centavos for every P200 (two hundred pesos) Republic letter No. 1040 was the current amount of P1 for every P200.

Rufang likewise said that some payments made by the BIR were in the form of partial cash payments, like the 28 percent final withholding tax on dividends, bonds and BIR. BIR believes that there should be included in collecting the total amount of August collection.

Hike in prices of rice on hold

By Christine A. Gopitan

THE NATIONAL FOOD SECURITY LAW proposed a planned P1 per kilo increase in the retail price of milled rice, which was expected to reduce the agency's losses this year.

The NFA decision was made upon instruction of President Manlapit-Arroyo during a meeting with Cabinet officials last Monday.

According to Agriculture Secretary Christopher Placido, the NFA regular rice will still be sold at P1.5 per kilo, while milled rice will remain at P1.60 per kilo.

The decision was made to help consumers cope with the rising cost of living due to soaring food prices.

Noting the price hike, however, will magnify the financial losses of the state-owned rice trading agency which is estimated to reach P6 billion this year-end. NFA is one of the non-banking government-owned and controlled corporations under the law to losses this year.

"The President decided to maintain prices for the sake of the consumers, but the agency will definitely be covering more losses this year," NFA administrator Virginia Tan, Jr. told the business.

The NFA, established by the Agriculture Department earlier proposed an increase in its retail prices by P1 per kilo for both milled and unmilled rice to curb the agency's financial losses by at least P1.5 billion yearly.

NFA will spend more for imported rice this year, with volume rising to 1.6 million metric tons compared to the 150,000 tons in the same period last year.

The agency has a budget of P20 billion this year—a 100 percent increase from the P14 billion spent during the same period last year—due to higher volume, the additional cost of its imported rice, and freight costs.

The average price in the international rice market stands between $200 to $240 per metric ton, held steady by the decision of leading exporters like China to keep additional rice supplies for their growing demand.

Tan said the agency decided to maintain a 90- to 120-day rice inventory buffer through higher imports on the back of weak local production.

Tightness has cut the country's agricultural export, highlighting the need to import rice as early as January this year to prevent supply short-ages caused by the delayed harvest season.

Tremendous powers are locked in human brains

DR. WILLIAM JAMES, considered the father of modern psychology, pointed out that "the average human being uses only 10 percent of his mental capacity."

He was probably being generous when he said that because, for me, the average human being used only 1 percent of his mental capacity. The human mind knows no limits aside from those it accepts.

If highly advanced and intelligent creatures from outer space were to report on their observation of human beings on Planet Earth over a period of thousands of years, they would most likely say, "You earthlings are shortchanging yourselves. You have tremendous powers locked inside your brains, but you are not using them. You allow these powers to be idle and go to waste."

Throughout the long history of humans, we find individuals with almost superhuman powers. Thus, they were even regarded as gods. We now think of them as existing only in myths, that they are not real persons.

But this is only because we have put limitations on what the human mind is capable of doing. I have a strong suspicion the stories of such beings are based on real people who actually lived in some distant past.

First humans

In the Christian Bible, the story is told of the first human beings, Adam and Eve. Endowed by God with supernatural powers, they lived in an ideal and beautiful place called Eden or Paradise. However, because they disobeyed God, as the story goes, they were driven out of Eden and stripped of their supernatural powers.

Apparently some people have regained or developed such powers.

For example, Uri Geller, a former Israeli paratrooper and entertainer, can bend metal spoons, coins and keys with his mind through telekinesis. He is also able to accelerate the biological process and make radish seeds sprout within minutes using only his mind. I saw him do this in Düsseldorf, Germany, in 1994.

An Austrian psychic can see the internal injury of a person and diagnose illness accurately by merely looking at the subject with his naked eyes without using any instruments. A year ago I met a 12-year-old Filipino from the Bicol Region who could see objects behind a wooden wall. Only recently, he was able to make a mobile phone SIM (subscriber identity module) card that he wanted so much appear in his hand.

Our Filipino surgeons can open up the human body with their bare hands, take out diseased tissues, tumors, and close the incision without a trace of the wound at all. Most of the time, there is no real opening. They are able to materialize internal diseased tissues outside the body.

A 70-year-old female Korean shaman can walk barefooted on two razor sharp bolo blades while in a trance without getting hurt and to diagnose illness and tell the fortune of specific persons in the audience.

I witnessed this myself in Korea during an Asian Traditional Arts Festival where I was one of several international resource speakers.

Why only a few

I can go on and on enumerating extraordinary powers displayed by certain individuals in many parts of the world. The question is how come only a few possess such tremendous powers?

I believe the answer is that most people do not bother to develop them. In the first place, very few believe such powers even exist. The greater portion of the human population, according to one mystic, is asleep. Another said they were in a state of deep hypnosis. We have been hypnotized to believe we cannot do these extraordinary things.

INNER AWARENESS

Jaime T. Licauco

People erroneously attributed such powers only to God. No human being should attempt to develop or possess them or they would be usurping God's powers. This mentality created so much limitation in us. We accepted such views without really determining their validity.

But one man astounded the whole world by performing deeds no ordinary human being had done before. He healed all sorts of illness, predicted the future with uncanny accuracy, read peoples minds, changed water into wine, raised the dead, walked on water and even raised himself from the dead.

And yet, that man, which all Christians consider to be God, Jesus Christ himself, said in John 14:12: "The works I have done you can do, and much more than these."

And when he tried to open up the minds of people to this awesome reality, they killed him.

THE FIVE COMPONENTS OF LIFESTYLE WEIGHT CONTROL ARE LIFESTYLE, EXERCISE, ATTITUDES, BELIEFS, AND WILLPOWER.

This is according to the Lean Program, the most successful and most thoroughly tested lifestyle change program for weight management.

Kelly Brownell, Yale University obesity research expert and creator of the Lean Program, says thoughts and feelings lay the difference between success and failure in permanently controlling your weight.

So if you're aware of how you feel and what you're watching out for, perfectionist thinking, light-bulb thinking, imperative thinking, and impossible dream thinking.

Perfectionist thinking

Brownell says it is human nature to measure

Attitude can derail weight loss plan

WELL AND GOOD

JESSIE JAMES

In perfect, that we learn to control the diet because we find out that expectations are almost always performance and we will only be disappointed if we become obsessed with it.

But Brownell discovered that many people start a weight-loss program with unrealistic expectations to never make mistakes or encounter difficulties. They are emotionally created when they do.

For example, he says perfectionist thinking makes people expect to lose weight every week. The reality is that some weeks their weight will remain stable or even go up a bit. This leads to negative feelings of disappointment and self-hatred.

It is hard before to expect to lose weight some weeks and to feel good about the best work you do in weeks when the scale does not budge.

Light-bulb thinking

A light bulb is either switched on or switched off. There is no in-between. The same is true for people with light-bulb or dichotomous thinking. This is also called the "all or nothing" attitude.

Brownell notes that light-bulb thinking is the classic attitude of people on weight loss programs. He says it is really every client he works with. "It involves wanting the world and losing weight in either right or wrong, perfect or terrible, good or bad."

He cites a person who, for six straight days, wrote in her log that eating a piece of cake on the seventh day light-bulb thinking makes this person believe. "I really like it now I am on my program."

The public and impression of having been "bad" leads to more eating on more negative feelings, according to Brownell.

To counter light-bulb thinking, he suggests talking back to yourself to point out how flawed it is to feel terrible about one slip. Reminders are inevitable and should be seen as a chance to learn rather than to feel like a complete failure.

Imperative thinking

Imperatives are words like "must," "have to," and "must." Brownell says the majority of people trying to lose weight is prepared with these imperatives. Examples from his many years as a weight loss coach are: "I will eat a salad for lunch every day," "Chocolate is my downfall so I will avoid it always," "I will never eat more than 1,200 calories."

Brownell says that people who feel they should never eat certain foods are especially likely to fall prey to imperative thinking. He says if you persist you will have eating purges, you will be fat for a week or two, but then may start to come and bounce about pounds.

When you break down and give in, feelings of failure can lead you to binge eat just as you have lost other types of food in the past. At this point, some people give up trying to lose weight and the ones that come around.

Instead of saying, "I will never eat candy bars," Brownell recommends saying to yourself, "I will try my best to eat candy only twice a day. If I have one, it is a sign to be encouraged, not to be discouraged."

Instead of promising, "I will exercise every day," continue, "This is my goal, and I will do my best to reach it. When I can't, I will try harder the next day."

Impossible dream thinking

"Impossible dreams" are extremely unrealistic goals or expectations. People may believe they can easily lose 10 pounds in two months, but losing weight will bring back an addictive habit. Brownell says people are often not aware that they have impossible dream thinking about their weight loss goals.

He cites the case of Audrey, one of his first overweight clients. She had been overweight since childhood and had never had a serious romantic relationship. Audrey would joke that, when she lost weight, she would meet the man of her dreams.

Apparently, she was serious because she became deeply depressed when she lost all her excess weight and still there was no romance on the horizon.

Brownell believes that, though it does no harm to hope for the best and inspire to improve your life through weight loss, you have to realize that losing weight may not change your life dramatically. He explains that impossible dream thinking can actually make weight loss disappointing if your fantasy is not fulfilled.

He advises "Concentrate yourself with what you will do today and tomorrow, not what life will be like when you lose weight."
